

Bonus 4

Three threads make sure that $A \rightarrow B \rightarrow C$

Starting the process B and C need to be locked and told to wait. This way even if the processor chooses either one A will still run first. Once A runs it will signal B that it is finished and B will unlock and run. When B is finished it will signal C that it is finished and C will unlock and run to finish the program.